

GOLD-PLATED SPEEDBOATS . . . Running $8,500 per copy, SK racing runabouts assume a prima donna position among inboard raceboats. The costly water racers will compete eight strong against approximately 100 hydroplanes and runabouts at Long Beach Marine Stadium on July 4. The annual speedfest, sponsored by the West Long Beach Lions Club, will offer other water thrills, including a flying water-skier. Proceeds go to club's youth program.

Bulls Look for Second Upset

Dynasty-tumbling Gardena attempts to put the skids to another high-flying West Coast Slo-Pitch League team tomorrow night when it battles South Torrance at Torrance Park.

Gardena humbled the proud Tappa Keggas, winners of 53 straight contests, last week.

South Torrance took advantage of the Kegga defeat, posting two wins of its own, to take the league leadership with a 4-0 record.

The Tappa Keggas and Gardena are deadlocked for second place with 3-1 slates. While the Bulls and South Torrance are engaged in their crucial, the Keggas will be having a comparatively easy time against host Santa Ana.

Gardena rammed home all of its runs in the first frame, taking advantage of three Kegga errors, and held off a frantic final-inning rally to notch a 3-2 win in the second game of a doubleheader.

The Tappa Keggas won the first game, 9-0. South Torrance warmed up for the crucial contests, whipping Hawthorne, 2-1 and 6-1.

Jimmy Hanny and Gene Leroy will pace the Knight Owl mound staff. Hanny came away with a one-hitter last weekend, and also contributed a pair of hits to the South cause.

South Torrance will rely heavily on a brother-act to bring home the bacon tomorrow. Jerry Schipper and brother Bill accounted for two runs apiece last week as the Knight Owls shoved across six runs in the sixth inning on five hits to pull out the win.

Jerry doubled with two men on in the sixth and then came across the plate himself as the elder Schipper connected for the circuit.

Bob Anderson hurled both ends of the doubleheader for Gardena last Friday, winning the second contest on a seven-hitter.

Sports Set For Redondo Festival

Athletics Highlight Redondo Celebrations

Water sports will play a dominant role over the weekend as Redondo Beach begins celebrating its 70th anniversary.

The Pacific Coast's first ocean race for power boats will become a reality on Saturday when a group of ambition drivers line up at 9 a. m. at Redondo Beach's King Harbor for an 85-mile race around Catalina Island and back.

The race is sponsored by the Redondo Chamber of Commerce as a part of the 10-day celebration.

The "Round Catalina Race"

entries will be divided into four classifications: inboards 18 through 22 feet, outboards 18 through 22 feet, inboards more than 22 feet and out-boards or inboard-outboards more than 22 feet.

Boaters interested in entering the race may secure entry forms at Portofina Marina in King Harbor. Entry fee is $10.

Red Devils Oppose Culver, Nab Two Lop-Sided Wins

Undefeated Culver City hosts the rampaging Torrance Red Devils Saturday at 3:30 p. m. Rancho will provide the opposition for the local nine on Sunday at 3:30 p. m. in Torrance Park.

Culver City will be faced with a hard-hitting team that has run up 30 runs and 20 hits in its last two contests.

The Torrance Bullets felt the sting of the Red Devils on Saturday, falling 22-9. Hawthorne was the Sunday victim, dropping an 8-1 decision to the Devils.

JOHN CAMBON was instrumental in the Bullets' undoing. The former Torrance High second baseman slammed two home runs and a triple in five trips to the plate.

Rick Hood and Bob Hettig also wielded heavy bats. Hood drove in three runs with two hits and Hettig slapped a pair of bingles.

IRV PALICA and Carey Hubert shared mound chores for the winners.

Hubert and Hettig backed up mound ace Don Coil the next day as the former Tartar chucker set down 10 men on strikes to gain the victory.

HUBERT CAME through with two hits while Hettig doubled for the winners. The Red Devils knocked eight hits in whipping Hawthorne. Against the Bullets, the local nine slammed 12 safeties in running up the winning margin.

Sox Deadlock Pennant Race In Ruth Loop

Throwing the Pacific American Babe Ruth League pennant chase into virtual deadlock, Kenny Phud hurled a three-hitter as the Red Sox slantout the loop-leading Athletics, 2-0.

Phud's effort failed to overshadow a near no-hit performance by Larry Tyner. Tyner guided the Athletics to a 10-0 win over the Orioles, losing his bid for a perfect game with one out in the final frame.

The league finally emerged with a home run leader when Leigh McArthur of the Red Sox swatted his second of the season.

Butterfield Hurls Perfecto As Tigers Rip Pale Hose

Torrance Little League's top-strikeout man, Greg Butterfield, added a no-hitter and 13 more victims to his record in leading the Tigers' to a 13-1 win over the White Sox.

Butterfield had all the help he could use as every Tiger hit. Paul Briscoe and Butterfield led the bombardment with three hits apiece. Len Herschler came through with a pair of bingles.

Spotting the Senators a pair of first inning runs, the Yankees tightened up, came through with three tallies of their own, and walked off with a 3-2 victory.

DONNIE SHOCKLEY led the Yanks with two of the team's five hits. Tim Netherly, a 500 hitter for the victors, drove in the winning run with a single after Billy Ernst doubled in the third frame.

In another tight contest, the Cubs edged the Indians, 7-6. Terry Frederickson took the nod, striking out 10 and allowing only three hits while going the distance.

WAYNE BLACKBURN and Carl Hutgren each socked two hits in three trips for the Cubs. Tom Fisher drove in the tying runs and then stole home with the winning tally in the final frame.

On 10 hits, the Braves walloped the Dodgers, 14-5. Mark Kurlik and Gary Hulseby divided the mound chores for the Braves. Tony Kelich led the winning attack with two doubles and two singles for a perfect day at bat. Steve Waggoner chipped in with two singles.

Minor League play saw a rash of upsets.

LARRY HART clobbered a three-run triple in the final frame as the Orioles surprised the Padres, 8-6.

Bob Rebutth hurled a 17-1 Seal win over the Beavers. In other games, the Giant swamped the Red Sox 12-4 and the Phillies took a one-sided 19-3 decision from the Pirates.

Braves Notch 2 Wins, Lead Central League

Racking up two lop-sided victories, the Torrance Central Minor League Braves maintained their loop lead.

Darkness in the fifth inning against the Cubs reverted the score back to the completed fourth frame giving the Braves a 20-4 win. A 10-4 victory over the Yanks on Saturday gave the loop leaders a 13-2 record.

The Yanks held on to second place with an 18-8 win over the Cardinals for an 11-4 mark.

THE BIG battle is developing over third and fourth place. The Dodgers (14-6) and the Giants (15-7) are battling for the show slot.

On Sunday the Dodgers whacked the Cubs, 21-11 as James Arnett hit a grand slam home run for the winners. In a crucial contest, the Dodgers gave way to the Giants by a 5-4 tally.

THE GIANTS made it two straight with a 17-2 win over the Cardinals on Sunday. The Cubs are in fifth with a 4-11 mark leaving the Cardinals still looking for their first victory.

Leading the training league are the Stars with the Bears second and the Angels in third.

El Toga Shriners Sell Grid Tickets

Tickets for the Southland's most spectacular summer event — the annual Chrine Pageant and North-South high school all-star football classic — are being handled in this area by the El Toga Shrine Club.

Sponsored by the Al Malakiah Temple and its 59 affiliated Shrine Clubs, the 11th renewal of his colorful event will be staged the night of Aug. 1 in Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, Arthur C. Golden, football chairman of the El Toga Club announced yesterday.

With net proceeds earmarked for the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children, Shriners Clubs are striving for record-breaking sales for this year's affair. All tickets are reserved and are scaled at $5, $3, and $1.50.

The Fearless Spectator

By Charles McCabe, Esquire

Next to the Mets and the metniks, their crazy mixed-up constituency, informed sporting circles in New York (that's me and the last two guys I talked to) are grabbed like this by the superlative romance left-handed Los Angeles Angel rookie pitcher Bo Belinsky is conducting with himself.

Brash and bonny Bo is in the great tradition of mildly deranged southpaws, imprinted on our culture firmly by the late Rube Waddell of the turn-of-the-century Philly Athletics.

Rube, as you doubtless recall, guzzled booze like it came free out of a hydrant, and is credited with using the first—and perhaps last—mustard spitball, from a hot dog he carried in his hip pocket while he pitched.

Mr. Belinsky has become a major league celebrity in less than two months. Recently the biggest American League crowd of the year (51,584) saw Bo take on the Yanks at Chavez Ravine. He lost that game, but went into it with a 6-1 record, which covered a no-hitter, a two-hitter and a four-hitter. After the no-hitter, he said he was not surprised.

The kookie rookie, who isn't even mentioned in Allen Roth's encyclopedic "Who's Who in Baseball, 1962," has taken his success like the smoothie he is. He has said of Walter Winchell, "We got to be pretty good friends, me and Walter."

A Los Angeles paper reported he called Mickey Mantle at Lenox Hill Hospital, New York, and said, "I hope you get better, Mickey, so I can strike you out." Bo, who acquired his social polish on the pavements of De Kalb Avenue in Brooklyn and Simpson Street in the Bronx, and various neighborhood pool halls, is considered a local boy around here.

After getting out of high school, he worked a year in a pottery plant and then gave the capitalist system the brush.

"I was shoveling stuff into wheelbarrows and box cars and that crap," he said recently. "I used to come home all white from the stuff. Finally, I said to myself, I'll put a gun to my head before I do this for a living."

He jealously husbanded his pitching arm in the minor leagues, with the result nobody heard of him. "How could you get serious down there?" he asks, reasonably. "If I did a good job, I wouldn't get rewarded properly anyway."

Bo is a boy who insists on his just desserts. Before the Yank game he told reporters, "Only 5,000 showed up when I pitched against Washington. I was insulted."

The measure of Bo's eminence can be taken when I tell you he is being viewed by alarm by no less a personage than Mr. J. G. Taylor Spink. Mr. Spink is publisher of The St. Louis Sporting News, "the bible of baseball." (If The Sporting News is baseball's bible, you can guess who is baseball's God). He guards the honor and traditions of baseball with the tenacity of a retriever.

Mr. Spink has heard of Bo saying such things as "I had more fun in the minors than I'm having in the majors—in the minors I could bet on myself," and "I've had to learn a new pitch in the majors to replace the spitter I used in the minors."

If Mr. Belinsky is being correctly quoted, the bible thundered, he is either "ridiculous" or he displays "a callous disregard for the game in which he performs." Angel officials, the bible suggests, "might have some words of their own with their bright young man."

That spitter, incidentally, may still be around. A Richmond pitcher who roomed with Bo last year, George Stepanovich, has said, "Bo's best pitch in 1961 was his spitter."

I was in Philly when the tragic word came that Bo went down in his first try against the Yanks in Los Angeles.

"Yeah," said a Philly writer, "I hear it's kinda dry in Southern California."
